Mutual fund investing involves risk including loss of principal. Investments in smaller companies typically exhibit higher volatility. Microcap companies have a higher risk of failure and typically experience a greater degree of volatility. Investing in microcap companies may not be appropriate for all investors. International investments may involve risk of capital loss from unfavorable fluctuation in currency values, from differences in generally accepted accounting principles, or from social, economic or political instability in other nations. In emerging markets, these risks are heightened. Diversification may not protect against market loss. The Hancock Horizon Family of Funds are available to U.S. investors only and are not available in all states.
